Connect selected to deliver new website for Greater Glasgow & Clyde NHS

Connect are delighted to announce their recent selection to deliver a new website for Greater Glasgow and Clyde NHS.

GG&C NHS provide services to over one million people and one of their key issues of concern is Sexual Health and Relationships. The Sandyford Initiative offers sexual, reproductive and emotional health services to the Glasgow area via a number of hubs and they wish to further support this initiative by the use of an accessible, friendly and information-rich website.

The site will provide relevant information to different key user groups such as young people and the practitioners who work to offer the services. The system will also be supported by two databases of information pertaining to translated patient information and the free condom distribution service.

Design and presentation is key as the site will provide information in an objective, matter of fact and engaging way. The supporting CMS will be developed utilising the open source Umbraco content management system with a number of bespoke features.
